Consisting of 96 acres, the three-mile-long linear park represents a unique collaborative planning effort between the City of Irvine and Irvine Community Development Company, one of the country's premier community developers. The master planning process consisted of a series of workshops and design charrettes, resulting in a community-based design that addressed the needs and desires of the City's residents. The first phase of the park, a one mile long segment was recently completed and dedicated to the City.
