

Camino Medical Group Tranquility Garden

A curved wall of stacked stone with a water feature adds texture and sound to the Tranquility Garden.

SWA provided landscape architectural services for the Camino Medical Group's new clinic, transforming an old brownfield site into a lush healing oasis.

In the site's tranquility garden, a curved wall of stacked stone and trickling water adds texture and sound, providing a relieving visual and acoustic experience for the patients of the infusion department. The setting is inspired by the traditional minimalist stone gardens of Japan with the design aims to heal and renew.

Abundant outdoor spaces are afforded for patients and staff to mingle and rest, making use of hedges, planters, walls, and seat walls to create a sense of privacy and shelter.

Location

Mountain View, California

Client

Camino Medical Group / Hawley Peterson & Snyder

SWA Scope

Landscape architectural services

Size

2.57 acres

Architect

Hawley Peterson & Snyder Architects

Awards

AIA San Francisco Integrated Practice Honor Award